INTRODUCTION

DISCLAIMER

The Human Fiction is a philosophical and psychological exploration of human perception, identity, meaning, and becoming.

It is not intended as medical, psychological, or clinical advice.

The content is interpretative in nature and should not be treated as absolute truth or instruction.

All concepts are presented as reflective frameworks to observe human experience, not to define it.

DEDICATION

Dedicated to those who think too deeply...

feel too silently...

and still continue to search for meaning inside
everything.

And to the part of every mind
that once asked:

“Who am I... really?”

Even when no answer felt enough.

INTRODUCTION

NOTE FROM THE AUTHOR

The Human Fiction is not written to convince, correct, or conclude.

It is written to observe.

What it observes is not the world as an external reality...

but the way reality is continuously constructed through thought, memory, and interpretation.

Most of what feels like “understanding” is not final truth...

it is ongoing narration.

A process that turns raw experience into structured meaning.

This work does not oppose meaning.

It only points to how meaning is formed in the first place.

Nothing in these pages requires belief.

And nothing requires rejection.

Because both belief and rejection arise from the same mechanism — interpretation.

The intention here is not to provide answers...

but to make the process of asking visible.

And once the process is seen clearly...

its automatic authority begins to soften on its own.

The Human Fiction does not end with a conclusion.

It ends with a shift in seeing — that experience does not need to be explained to be real.

It only needs to be seen.

PROLOGUE —

BEFORE BECOMING BEGINS

Har insaan ke andar ek silent pressure continuously chalta rehta hai...

jo kabhi visible nahi hota, par har moment ko shape karta rehta hai.

Ye pressure ek simple sa question se start hota hai:

“Main kya banunga?”

Lekin agar is question ko sirf thought na samjha jaye...
toh ye ek psychological architecture hai.

Ek invisible structure jo present ko hold karta hai...

aur usko continuously ek imagined future ke against measure karta hai.

Mind sirf present ko experience nahi karta...

wo present ko project bhi karta hai.

Aur projection kabhi neutral nahi hoti...

wo hamesha directional hoti hai:

better

higher

improved

complete

ideal

Aur jab ideal exist karta hai...

toh present automatically “incomplete” ban jata hai.

Is structure ke andar koi moment free nahi hota.

Har experience ek comparison field mein enter hota hai:

what is vs what is imagined

Aur yahan ek subtle violence hoti hai...

jo visible nahi hoti:

present ko continuously insufficient feel karwana.

Becoming koi single journey nahi hai...

ye ek continuous recalibration loop hai:

present arises

future image appears gap is felt

effort begins

temporary alignment

future shifts again

loop restarts

Aur ye loop itni smooth speed se chalta hai...

ki lagta hai ye hi reality hai.

Mind ek illusion create karta hai:

“Main ek fixed point se ek better point ki taraf ja raha hoon.”

Lekin dono points imagination mein hote hain...

sirf movement real lagta hai.

Becoming ka sabse hidden function ye nahi hai ki tum change ho...

ye hai ki tum kabhi settle na ho.

Kyuki settling ka matlab hota hai:

future projection ka pause ho jana.

Aur mind ko pause unsafe lagta hai.

Is book ka entry point koi philosophy nahi hai...

ye ek lived structure hai:

jo har insaan silently carry karta hai.

Aur jab ye structure visible hota hai...

toh ek strange discomfort aata hai:

ki jo “main ban raha hoon” lagta tha...

wo ek continuous mental motion tha.

Aur jo “main hoon” lagta hai...

wo already unfolding present moment hai

INTRODUCTION

THE FICTION OF BECOMING

Har insaan ke andar ek silent current chal raha hota hai...

jo kabhi rest nahi leta.

Ye current ek simple question se start hota hai:

“Main kya banunga?”

Lekin ye question utna innocent nahi hota jitna lagta hai.

Iske andar ek hidden assumption hota hai:

“Jo main ab hoon... wo final nahi hai.”

Aur yahi assumption poore human experience ko shape karta hai.

Ek future version hamesha present ke saath chalta rehta hai.

Wo visible nahi hota...

lekin feel hota hai.

better me
stronger me
healed me
successful me
complete me

Ye sab ek parallel existence ki tarah present ke saath rehte hain.

Aur present un sab ke against silently measured hota rehta hai.

Is structure mein koi bhi moment neutral nahi hota.

Har moment ek comparison field mein enter hota hai:

what I am vs what I should be

Aur jahan “should be” exist karta hai...

wahan “is” kabhi enough nahi hota.

Becoming koi event nahi hai...

ye ek continuous psychological motion hai.

Ek loop:

present experience

future projection

emotional gap

effort

temporary shift

new projection

Aur ye loop itni smooth speed se chalta hai...

ki lagta hai ye natural reality hai.

Hum is motion ko “growth” kehte hain.

“improvement” kehte hain.

“journey” kehte hain.

Lekin ek deeper observation ye hai:

movement aur arrival same cheez nahi hote.

Aur becoming aksar arrival create nahi karta...

wo sirf next movement create karta hai.

THE INNER STRUCTURE

Becoming ka sabse subtle layer ye hai:

present ko incomplete feel karwana.

Aur jab present incomplete lagta hai...

toh ek invisible urgency activate hoti hai:

“abhi kuch aur hona chahiye.”

Is urgency ke andar hi poora psychological identity system build hota hai.

self-worth

ambition

failure

success

healing

transformation

Sab isi movement ke different expressions hain.

Agar thoda aur silently dekha jaye...

toh ek strange possibility open hoti hai:

jo “becoming” lagta hai...

wo actually “avoiding the present” bhi ho sakta hai.

Aur jo “present” lagta hai...

wo already complete experience ho sakta hai...

bina kisi future definition ke.

Is book ka purpose ye nahi hai ki tumhe stop kar de.

Na goals ko reject karna.

Na life ko deny karna.

Ye sirf ek subtle shift point dikhata hai:

ki jo movement tumhe define karta hai...

wo tum ho nahi.

Jab becoming clearly visible ho jata hai...

toh ek strange clarity aati hai:

tum kisi cheez ki taraf ja nahi rahe...

tum sirf ek continuous unfolding ko interpret kar rahe ho.

Aur jab interpretation soft hota hai...

toh experience apne aap zyada direct lagne lagta hai.

Na pressure.

Na comparison.

Na hidden finish line.

Sirf movement...

jo already ho raha hai.

Aur yahin se Book III ka observation start hota hai:

not to reach a final version of yourself...

but to see why “final version” was ever needed in the first place.

PART

THE FUTURE SELF ILLUSION

The Illusion of “Who I Will Become”

Hum apne aap ko aksar present mein nahi dekhte...

hum apne aap ko future ke through dekhte hain.

Ek invisible image continuously chal rahi hoti hai:

“Main aage jaake kya banunga”

Aur ye image itni natural lagti hai...

ki hum usko imagination nahi samajhte.

Hum usko direction samajhte hain.

Lekin agar closely dekha jaye...

toh jo “future self” hai...

wo present experience mein exist hi nahi karta.

Wo sirf ek mental projection hota hai.

Mind ek current moment ko uthata hai...

aur usko forward time mein extend kar deta hai.

Aur phir ek character create hota hai:

better version of me

successful version of me

healed version of me

complete version of me

Lekin interesting baat ye hai:

ye “version” kabhi available nahi hota.

Wo hamesha ahead rehta hai.

Aur isi “ahead” hone ki wajah se...

wo ek permanent motivation ban jata hai.

Hum chase karte rehte hain...

ek identity ko jo abhi exist nahi karti.

Aur is chasing mein...

present experience secondary ho jata hai.

Becoming ka illusion yahan se start hota hai:

ki jo main hoon abhi...

wo enough nahi hai.

Aur jo main banunga...

wo real main hoga.

Lekin “real main” hamesha future mein shift hota rehta hai.

Isliye becoming kabhi complete nahi hota.
Wo ek moving horizon hota hai.
Tum jitna uske paas jaate ho...
wo utna hi door chala jata hai.
Aur mind is movement ko progress samajhta hai.
Lekin agar deeply dekha jaye...
toh ye progress nahi...
ye delay system hai.
Ek continuous postponement of being.
Aur jab ye clearly dikhta hai...
toh ek strange realization aata hai:
jo “I will become” hai...
wo actually “I am avoiding what is” bhi ho sakta hai.
Aur present moment...
kabhi insufficient nahi hota.
Bas comparison usko insufficient bana deta hai.
Aur comparison ka root hamesha future image hota hai.
Isliye “who I will become” ek innocent thought nahi
hai...
ye ek identity engine hai.

Jo present ko redefine karta rehta hai... future ke lens se.

The Future Self Projection Mechanism

Future self koi real entity nahi hota...

ye ek mental projection system hota hai jo present ko continuously extend karta rehta hai.

Mind ek simple kaam karta hai:

wo present moment ko uthata hai...

aur usko time ke aage project kar deta hai.

Jaise ek shadow ko light ke aage stretch kar diya jaye...

aur phir maan liya jaye ki wo shadow already “next stage” hai.

Lekin wo extension kabhi actual reality mein exist nahi karta.

Wo sirf thought-space mein exist karta hai.

Aur isi thought-space mein ek identity create hoti hai:

“jo main ban sakta hoon”

Ye “ban sakta hoon” statement innocent lagta hai...

lekin iske andar ek hidden structure hota hai:

present ko incomplete maanna.

Projection ka mechanism simple nahi hota...

ye multi-layered hota hai.

Mind ek ideal image banata hai:

better version

successful version

healed version

stable version

complete version

Ye images real nahi hoti...

lekin emotionally real feel hoti hain.

Jaise hi ideal image create hota hai...

present automatically “less” lagne lagta hai.

Aur yahi gap generate hota hai:

what is vs what should be

Ye gap uncomfortable hota hai...

aur mind us discomfort ko reduce karna chahta hai.

Isliye ek movement start hota hai:

“main wahan tak pahunchunga”

Jaise hi tum move karte ho...

ideal image bhi shift ho jata hai.

Target constantly aage chala jata hai.

Aur tum kabhi “arrive” nahi karte.

future image □ present comparison □ incompleteness □ effort □ updated future image □ repeat

Is loop ka hidden effect ye hai:

tum hamesha “becoming” mein rehte ho...

never “being”.

Mind ye belief create karta hai:

“Main abhi incomplete hoon, isliye future important hai.”

Lekin ek deeper observation ye hai:

incompleteness ek real condition nahi...

wo comparison ka byproduct hai.

Agar comparison drop ho jaye...

toh “incomplete” bhi disappear ho jata hai.

Sirf present bachta hai...

without measurement.

Future self koi destination nahi hota...

wo ek reference point hota hai jo present ko shape karta rehta hai.

Aur jab ye reference point visible ho jata hai...

toh ek strange clarity aati hai:

jo “future me main hoon”...

wo abhi imagination hai.

Aur jo “abhi main hoon”...

wo already complete experience hai, bina definition ke.

Becoming ka structure tab tak powerful lagta hai...

jab tak projection invisible hota hai.

Jab projection dikh jata hai...

toh future dissolve nahi hota...

bas uski authority gir jati hai.

Aur tab ek simple recognition bachta hai:

experience ko complete hone ke liye future ki zarurat nahi hoti.

Sirf ek continuous present hota hai...

jo already unfold ho raha hai.

PART

THE BECOMING MACHINE

CHAPTER 3

The Fiction of Growth

Hum growth ko ek natural truth ki tarah treat karte hain.

Jaise life ka default rule ho:

“hamesha better banna hai”

Lekin agar growth ko directly observe kiya jaye...

toh ek uncomfortable pattern dikhta hai.

Growth kabhi “being” se start nahi hoti...

wo hamesha “lack” se start hoti hai.

Ek feeling:

“abhi main complete nahi hoon.”

Aur isi feeling se ek direction create hoti hai:

“mujhe improve hona hai.”

Growth ka base equation simple hai:

present self $\neq$ ideal self

Aur jahan inequality hoti hai...

wahan movement start ho jata hai.

present ko insufficient maanna

ideal self imagine karna

effort create karna

temporary improvement

normalization

naya ideal create hona

repeat

Growth actually “progress” nahi hai...

ye comparison ka continuous re-calibration hai.

Aur comparison kabhi khatam nahi hota...

kyuki ideal self fixed nahi hota.

Wo hamesha update hota rehta hai.

Is system ka sabse strong impact ye hota hai:

present kabhi enough feel nahi karta

Chahe kitna bhi achieve ho jaye...

ek naya gap immediately appear ho jata hai.

Growth sirf external improvement nahi hai...

ye internal dissatisfaction ko sustain karne ka system
bhi hai.

Aur dissatisfaction hi fuel hai.
Agar thoda sa gap clearly dikha liya jaye...
toh ek strange clarity aati hai:
growth khud problem nahi hai...
problem ye hai ki growth ko identity bana diya gaya hai.
Jab identity “becoming” pe based hoti hai...
toh “being” always incomplete lagta hai.
Agar ideal self ka pressure soften ho jaye...
toh growth stop nahi hoti...
bas uska emotional weight gir jata hai.
Aur jo bachta hai...
wo ek simple action hota hai:
without urgency, without identity crisis.
Na chase.
Na escape.
Sirf movement.

The Achievement Identity Cycle

Hum achievements ko sirf results nahi samajhte...

hum unko apni identity ka proof bana dete hain.

Ek simple kaam hota hai:

kuch achieve karna, kuch prove karna, kuch reach karna.

Lekin mind iske around ek deeper structure build kar deta hai:

“Main tab hi valid hoon jab main achieve kar raha hoon”

Aur yahin se cycle start hota hai.

1. INITIAL LACK

Present self insufficient feel hota hai.

2. IDEAL IMAGE

Ek better version create hota hai:

successful me

respected me

complete me

3. STRIVING PHASE

Effort start hota hai.

Energy direction le leti hai.

4. ACHIEVEMENT MOMENT

Kuch milestone hit hota hai.

Temporary satisfaction aati hai.

5. NORMALIZATION

Wo achievement normal ban jata hai.

Identity usse adapt kar leti hai.

6. NEW GAP

Turant ek naya “next level” create ho jata hai.

Achievement actually closure nahi deta...

wo sirf temporary relief deta hai.

Aur relief ke baad...

gap wapas aa jata hai.

Mind achievement ko use karta hai:

self-worth stabilize karne ke liye identity validate karne ke liye

inner emptiness cover karne ke liye

Lekin paradox ye hai:

jitna achievement hota hai...

utna hi next lack generate hota hai.

lack ☐ effort ☐ achievement ☐ normalization ☐ new lack ☐ repeat

Aur ye loop kabhi stop nahi hota...

kyuki ideal self hamesha moving hota hai.

Achievement ka asli function external success nahi hai...

internal incompleteness ko manage karna hai.

Aur jab ye structure visible hota hai...

toh achievement ka emotional weight gir jata hai.

Na motivation disappear hota hai...

na action.

Bas identity dependency kam ho jati hai.

Kaam hota rehta hai...

lekin ab uska meaning identity validation nahi hota.

Sirf movement hota hai...

without psychological burden.

PART

THE SELF-REPAIR NARRATIVE

The Fiction of Healing

Hum healing ko ek final state samajh lete hain...

jaise ek point ho jahan sab theek ho jayega.

Lekin agar healing ko closely observe kiya jaye...

toh wo koi fixed end-state nahi hoti.

Wo ek continuous interpretation shift hota hai.

Ek experience hota hai jo painful lagta hai...

aur usko hum “damage” label kar dete hain.

Phir ek future imagine hota hai:

“jab main heal ho jaunga...”

Lekin is imagination ke andar ek hidden structure hota hai:

present self ko broken maanna

Healing ka process aksar aise chalta hai:

pain occur hota hai

label attach hota hai (“trauma”, “hurt”, “damage”) identity form hoti hai (“I am broken”)

future self imagine hota hai (“I will be healed”)

continuous self-monitoring start hoti hai

loop repeat hota hai

Healing ka idea khud ek comparison system pe based hota hai:

present self vs ideal healed self

Aur jahan comparison hota hai...

wahan incompleteness automatic hoti hai.

Jo cheez healing lagti hai...

wo kabhi kabhi sirf:

reinterpretation

reframing

meaning restructuring

hoti hai.

Experience change nahi hota...

uska story change hota hai.

Pain ko jab meaning diya jata hai...

toh wo ek identity ban jata hai.

Aur jab identity ban jati hai...

toh healing us identity ko sustain karne ka process ban sakta hai.

pain □ meaning □ identity (“I am hurt”) □ future healing image □ effort □ temporary relief □ re-labeling □
repeat

Agar pain ko bina interpretation ke dekha jaye...

toh wo sirf sensation + thought flow hota hai.

Na permanent story.

Na fixed identity.

Healing tab radically change hoti hai...

jab “broken self” idea weaken hota hai.

Kyuki agar koi fixed broken self hi nahi...

toh fixed healed self bhi nahi ho sakta.

Healing ka deepest shift ye hota hai:

experience ko repair karna nahi...

experience ko ownership se free dekhna.

Aur jab ownership drop hoti hai...

toh pain ka weight change ho jata hai.

Na because it disappeared...

but because it is no longer claimed as “mine story”.

The Broken Self Narrative

Hum apne aap ko aksar ek story ke through define karte hain...

aur us story ka ek common version hota hai:

“I am broken.”

Ye sirf ek feeling nahi hoti...

ye ek narrative structure hota hai.

Ek experience hota hai jo uncomfortable hota hai...

aur mind usko ek stable identity mein convert kar deta hai.

painful experience

interpretation (“ye galat hua”)

repetition of memory

emotional reinforcement

identity formation (“I am broken”)

Aur ek baar ye identity set ho jaye...

toh har naya experience usi lens se filter hota hai normal moment □ “temporary relief”

painful moment □ “proof of brokenness”

Aur isi asymmetric filtering se narrative strong hota jata hai.

Broken self koi fixed entity nahi hota...

ye selective interpretation ka result hota hai.

Mind sirf kuch moments ko highlight karta hai...

aur baaki ko ignore.

Aur jo highlighted hota hai...

wo identity ban jata hai.

Brokenness ka sense tab strong hota hai jab:

past ko repeatedly revisit kiya jaye present ko comparison se dekha jaye future ko “fixing project” bana diya jaye

Aur is combination se ek stable story emerge hoti hai:

“Something is fundamentally wrong with me”

memory □ interpretation □ identity label □ perception filter □ confirmation bias □ stronger identity

Agar observation thoda clear ho jaye...

toh ek strange gap dikhta hai:

experience aur story ek cheez nahi hain.

Experience sirf hota hai...

story usko define karti hai.

Broken self narrative tab weak hota hai...

jab har experience ko “proof” ki tarah use karna band ho jata hai.

Aur experience ko sirf experience rehne diya jata hai.

Shayad “broken” koi actual state nahi...

sirf ek repeated interpretation pattern hai.

Aur jab interpretation pattern visible ho jata hai...

toh identity ka weight naturally kam ho jata hai.

Na because kuch fix hua...

but because kuch define karna urgent nahi lagta.

PART

THE COLLAPSE OF BECOMING

The Desire to Change Oneself

Hum aksar ye sochte hain ki problem hum mein hai...

isliye hume change hona chahiye.

Lekin agar is desire ko closely dekha jaye...

toh ye sirf change ki wish nahi hoti.

Ye ek rejection hota hai present self ka.

Desire to change usually is tarah kaam karta hai:

present self observe hota hai judgment aata hai (“ye enough nahi hai”)

ideal self imagine hota hai gap create hota hai

change ka pressure build hota hai

Change ka desire aksar improvement nahi hota...

wo dissatisfaction ka refined form hota hai.

Aur dissatisfaction ka root hamesha comparison hota hai:

what is vs what should be

Jab hum kehte hain:

“mujhe change hona hai”

uske neeché silently ye bhi hota hai:

“jo main hoon, wo acceptable nahi hai”

Aur yahi acceptance ka failure loop start karta hai.

present rejection

ideal projection

effort

temporary adjustment

return of dissatisfaction

new ideal

Aur ye cycle endless hoti hai...

kyunki ideal self hamesha moving target hota hai.

Change ka idea tab tak powerful lagta hai...

jab tak present ko incomplete maana jata hai.

Lekin agar present ko direct dekha jaye...

bina comparison ke...

toh “change” ka urgency structure weak ho jata hai.

Iska matlab ye nahi ki movement band ho jata hai.

Kaam, learning, evolution — sab continue rehta hai.

Bas ek internal pressure dissolve ho jata hai:

“main abhi wrong hoon”

Hum change isliye nahi chahte kyuki hum grow karna chahte hain...

hum change isliye chahte hain kyuki hum present ko reject karte hain.

Jab present self ko bina label ke dekha jata hai...

toh wo ek project nahi lagta...

wo ek happening lagta hai.

Aur happening ko fix karne ki urgency kam ho jati hai.

Na resistance.

Na forced transformation.

Sirf awareness of what is already unfolding.

ENDING

END REALIZATION

Agar yahan tak aaya hai...

toh shayad ek cheez notice hone lagi ho...

ki kuch “solve” nahi hua.

Aur shayad yahi point hai.

Humne hamesha ye assume kiya:

ki understanding se kuch change hoga.

Lekin ab ek strange clarity aati hai:

understanding bhi ek movement hai...

“Main kya banunga” — ye question kabhi future ke baare mein nahi tha...

ye present ke dissatisfaction ka echo tha.

Aur dissatisfaction kabhi reality ka part nahi tha...

wo comparison ka side-effect tha.

“Main incomplete hoon”

“Main complete ho sakta hoon”

Dono ek hi system ke do poles the.

Aur jab system dikhta hai...

toh poles meaningful nahi rehte.

Na incompleteness bachi...

na completeness ka idea.

Sirf ek silent fact:

experience is happening.

Without explanation.

Without hierarchy.

Without timeline.

Becoming ka sabse hidden illusion ye nahi tha ki tum grow kar rahe ho...

illusion ye tha ki tum "someone" ho jo grow kar raha hai.

Aur wo "someone" kabhi directly milta hi nahi.

Sirf thought ke andar ek reference point hota hai.

Jab ye clearly dikhta hai...

toh ek strange reversal hota hai:

Tum experience ko live karna start nahi karte...

tum realize karte ho ki experience kabhi stop hi nahi hua tha.

Sirf interpretation uske upar chal raha tha.

nahi tha.

Na “becoming” start hua tha...

na “becoming” end hota hai.

Sirf ek continuous unfolding...

jo apne aap ko “someone becoming” ki tarah read karta raha.

Na future self real hai.

Na present self fixed hai.

Na journey linear hai.

Sirf shifting perception hai...

jo khud ko story bana leta hai.

Aur jab ye sab bhi unnecessary lagne lagta hai...

toh koi new state nahi aati.

Sirf ye obvious ho jata hai:

jo ho raha hai... wo explain hone se pehle hi complete
hai.

Aur explanation...

sirf usko delay karta hai.

Isliye Book III end nahi hoti...

wo sirf ek illusion of direction drop kar deti hai.

Aur jo bachta hai...

wo kisi conclusion ki tarah nahi hota.

Wo bas hota hai:

uninterpreted presence.

without becoming anything else.

EPILOGUE

EPILOGUE — AFTER BECOMING COLLAPSES

Agar is poore structure ko ek distance se dekha jaye...

toh ek subtle collapse notice hota hai.

Becoming kabhi disappear nahi hota...

lekin uski authority dissolve ho jati hai.

Future ab bhi imagine hota hai...

lekin wo present ko define nahi karta.

Effort ab bhi hota hai...

lekin uske peeche ek silent clarity hoti hai:

ye movement necessary nahi hai, bas happening hai.

Pehele experience ek project lagta tha...

ab experience ek unfolding lagta hai.

Pehele har cheez ko improve karna zaroori lagta tha...

ab improvement ek optional movement lagta hai.

Loop ab bhi exist karta hai...
lekin uska emotional charge kam ho jata hai:
no urgency
no identity panic
no existential pressure Sirf motion rehta hai...
without psychological weight.
Jo “becoming” lagta tha...
wo actually ek continuous interpretation of presence tha.
Aur jab interpretation soft ho jati hai...
toh presence apne aap zyada visible ho jata hai.
Na koi final self milta hai...
na koi perfect version arrive hota hai.
Sirf ek simple clarity bachi rehti hai:
jo bhi ho raha hai...
wo already ho raha hai.
Aur usko complete banane ki zarurat...
kabhi thi hi nahi.

EPILOGUE

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Lalit R. Mishra is the creator of The Human Fiction series.

He writes from observation, not ideology.

From watching how thought builds identity, how meaning attaches itself to experience, and how a “self” is continuously constructed through narrative.

His central question is simple:

Why does experience feel like it is happening to someone?

His work does not aim to provide answers or beliefs.

It aims to make the structure of thinking visible.

In his view, clarity is not something added to life.

It appears when unnecessary interpretation quiets down.

The Human Fiction is not a philosophy to follow.

It is an exploration of how human experience becomes a story — and how that story is mistaken for reality.

He does not claim authority over truth.

He only points toward the process through which truth is interpreted.
